I met Carmine on the set of Lily of the Feast. He played the part of a degenerate gambler named, Masto, who had aged throughout the film 30 years. The intensity and compassion that he brought to the role was exceptional. Carmine is extremely talented actor and I cannot wait to work with him again.

I just had one of the greatest experiences of my career!

I have directed many actors over the years but Carmine Raspaolo has been by far, the best!

He is a Directors DREAM!!!

I say that because he knows his stuff. He comes prepared ready to work. He takes direction beautifully and is one hell of a great actor!

He is generous beyond words to his fellow actors and always finds a way to make them shine. He is a working actor who gets paid the big bucks and yet not afraid to do small parts in indie films and original plays whenever asked to help out a friend. A part is never too small for Carmine. He is always there to help, work, do. His love of acting shines through as he makes the audience his own.

It was a pleasure and honor to work with him in my current production of "They Just Don't Get It". He plays two Cameo parts and steals the show.

Thank you Carmine for making my production better and my life a little Brighter!!!

Love you lots

"I had the great opportunity of working with Carmine. His professionalism on and off the camera is incomparable. As an actor his skill lies in his eyes and in his head, creating a psychological depth to his characters much like the younger Al Pacino did."
